Hundreds of African American Businesses Return to Atlanta Business League

September 9, 2009 - Atlanta, GA. Hundreds of successful African American female business owners are expected to return to the 25th Annual Super Tuesday Conference, presented by Atlanta's oldest business organization, The Atlanta Business League. The day-long conference occurs Tuesday, October 6, 2009 from 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. at the Atlanta Marriott Marquis, 265 Peachtree Center Avenue.

For the past 25 years the ABL Super Tuesday committee has selected and honored Atlanta business women in various categories: Millennium Pacesetter, Outstanding Achievement (Woman of the Year), Non-Traditional Business Enterprises, Success Against the Odds, Creative Style, and Home Based Business Achievement. This year, past winners will attend the awards luncheon to celebrate their achievements and those of the new honorees.

Past honorees include:

- Miranda Mack McKenzie, Anheuser-Busch Companies
- Rita Samuels, Founder Georgia Coalition of Black Women
- Ingrid Saunders Jones, The Coca Cola Company
- Beverly Harvard, Former City of Atlanta Police Chief
- Donata Russell Major, H.J. Russell Foundation
- Dr. Beverly Daniel Tatum, Spelman College
- Alexis Scott, Atlanta Daily World
- Karen Duckett, Duckett Design Group, Inc.
- Dr. Gloria Campbell-D'Hue, Atlanta Center of Dermatology & Medi Spa, PC
- Charlotte King, Snowden King

In addition to the awards luncheon, conference highlights include seminars and interactive sessions, vendor exhibit hall, Networking Opportunities, AirTran Airways Business Class tickets and the 2009-2010 Resource Guide to African-American Female Business Owners & Professionals. Co-Chairs for the 25th Anniversary Celebration are Super Tuesday Visionary Alice White Bussey, Co-Owner of Bussey Florist, and Beverly Dabney, VP, Sr. Community Relations Officer for JP Morgan Chase.

The Atlanta Business League is led by Leona Barr Davenport, and was established in 1933 as an affiliate of the National Business League, which was founded by Dr. Booker T. Washington. The ABL fosters the growth, creation, and development of successful business enterprises owned, operated and managed by African-Americans in metropolitan Atlanta.
