Yvonne Bryant Johnson is President and CEO of Bryant & Associates, LLC, an executive coaching, facilitation services and training company located in Atlanta, GA. Named "One of Atlanta's Top 100 Black Women of Influence" for 2007, 2008 and 2009, Ms. Bryant Johnson is also an Executive Coach for the Executive MBA Program at Coles College of Business, Kennesaw State University. She also served as a mentor with the Goizueta Business School at Emory University and graduated from Leadership Atlanta and Leadership America. In addition to coaching individuals and teams, the company focuses on leadership development, team building, and creation of innovative solutions to solve team challenges.

Ms. Johnson is a certified LEGO Serious Play facilitator and brings this service to her customers through a partnership with Robert Rasmussen and Associates. You can see her work with the Microsoft/LEGO Serious Play WomenBuild Community project on facebook.

Since starting her company in 1998, Yvonne Bryant Johnson has shared 25+ years of corporate experience and business acumen to guide corporate executives and professional organizations toward sales, leadership development, and customer service excellence. Throughout her career and business she has served the following customers: The Home Depot, Southern Company, Georgia Power, AGL Resources, The Ritz-Carlton Hotels, Chick-fil-A, AT&T, The Federal Home Loan Bank Atlanta, Partnership Against Domestic Violence, Office of Adoptions, the National Black Leadership Commission on AIDS, Georgia Microenterprise Network (GMEN), Susan G. Komen for the Cure, the Arthritis Foundation and many other corporations, non-profit organizations and small businesses.

Prior to founding Bryant & Associates, Ms. Bryant Johnson was a Branch Manager for AT&T's Atlanta Customer Care Organization and Global Sales team and was ranked in the company's top 2% of customer care and sales employees, which earned her an elite membership in the Leading Legends and Leaders Council. She was also the Director of the Educational Opportunity Program at George Washington University.

Yvonne Bryant Johnson serves as 2009 Chair of the Board of Directors of the Georgia Center for Child Advocacy; an organization named Nonprofit of the Year by the Georgia Minority Business Awards. She is a compassionate leader who brings a wealth of leadership experience and advocacy for children and women to the position. Ms. Bryant Johnson served on the merger committee that created the Georgia Center for Child Advocacy from two organizations: the Fulton County Child Advocacy Center and the Georgia Center for Children. She has a passion for community service and has served as board chair of the following organizations: Youth Ensemble of Atlanta (YEA), Partnership Against Domestic Violence (PADV), and SCELL (a Sickle Cell organization that was based out of the Grady Health System). In addition, Ms. Bryant Johnson serves on the board of the Atlanta Business League.

As a member of The Atlanta Business League (ABL) Ms. Bryant Johnson successfully orchestrated the organization's First Annual Congress on the State of Black Business in Metro Atlanta in 2007. A strong proponent of preparing college students to excel personally and professionally, she provides leadership to the ABL's Student Business Shadow Project. She is also a graduate of the inaugural Greater Atlanta Economic Alliance Academy and served on Church's Chicken Minority Advisory Council.

Ms. Bryant Johnson's educational accomplishments include earning an MBA from Emory University, and attending Johns Hopkins University and the Universities of London and Ghana. She graduated with honors from Spelman College, and in 1996 was one of the first Spelman graduates to receive the Alumnae Achievement Award in business.
